Clean water trickles into refugee camps

Associated Press

MA, Zaire — The Rwandan effort ran into another colossal setback Wednesday when U.S. Army engineers churned out 46,000 gallons of clean water, only to find out there weren't enough trucks to deliver it.

Thousands of gallons of clean water trickled into the camps, but it was not enough to beat the cholera crisis sweeping through refugee camps here, killing thousands of people and threatening tens of thousands more.

A trickle left for the camps Wednesday from the U.S. operation at Kivu, which is contaminated with parasites and floating bodies.

U.S. Army engineers said the rest of the priceless commodity was stalled because U.N. officials were able to get only two leaking, half-busted trucks.

Far away from where the engineers worked, refugees continued to die from a spring contaminated with human waste.

U.N. organizers said they were waiting for tanker trucks in Zaire, shipping in about 10 tankers from Croatia and Croatia, but were able to get only a few from gasoline-shipper companies Wednesday.

"Of course we're disappointed because we have worked day and night to produce this water like the U.S. wanted, and it's just sitting here. It's really kind of stunned," said Eric Hanson, a supervisor at the plant producing purity out of Lake Kivu.

The Army water specialists flew in from Germany to Goma late Monday and had both of their water-purification machines pumping out clean water at the rate of 1,200 gallons/hour by midday Tuesday.

U.N. officials last week urgently requested outside help in providing clean water to the estimated 1.2 million Hutu refugees, who fled to eastern Zaire from neighboring Rwanda this month as Tutsi-led rebels emerged victorious in the civil war there. The camps immediately became breeding grounds for disease and death.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said more than 18,000 people had died in the camps in the past week. The commission appealed for more help from Washington to get bodies buried before they fuel a second wave of disease.

French troops have been working feverishly to dig mass graves, using earth-moving equipment and explosives to blast through hardened lava. The 2,500 French soldiers are too few to handle the burials and protect refugees from ethnic slaughter.

"The digging isn't keeping up with the death toll, which is obvious from the bodies all around us, on every road, in every field," said Ray Wilkinson, the UNHCR's chief spokesman in Goma.

He said U.N. officials had pressed Brig. Gen. Jack Nix, the American Army commander in Goma, and the U.S. State Department in Washington on Tuesday to help the burial effort

"within 48 hours."

Wilkinson said they needed 25 to 30 trucks for body collection, bulldozers and backhoes for producing mass graves, and teams of cemetery-designers for Goma and surrounding camps.

Without the aid, he said, "the situation will just get worse and worse. If those bodies stay out for very long, then you are going to get bloated bodies and you're going to get disease."

The overall commander of U.S. forces in and around Rwanda, Lt. Gen. Daniel Schroeder, was expected to fly into Rwanda's capital, Kigali, on Thursday to oversee the establishment of the new American headquarters there, according to military spokesman Col. Robert Mirelson.

Local Red Cross chapters raise over $100,000 for Rwandan relief effort

By DARC Y KIRKHAM
Universe Staff Writer

Local chapters of the American Red Cross have raised over $100,000 to ease suffering in Rwanda and surrounding areas.

The crisis incurred by warring factions within Rwanda left an estimated 2 million refugees seeking water, food, clothing and shelter.

The American Red Cross is assisting the International Red Cross to alleviate suffering in refugee camps.

One anonymous Utahn donated $100,000 for the Rwandan relief effort," said Dawn Aoki, director of public support for the Utah Red Cross. "We are receiving donations pretty steadily throughout the day."

"We are supporting the International Red Cross relief efforts in Rwanda," said Corry Tanner, executive director of the Central Utah Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The Central Utah chapter has raised approximately $100,000, Tanner said.

The Red Cross issued a statement asking for donations, instead of volunteers, to help in the effort.

"Because of the nature of the operation and the extreme conditions, the only volunteers on location are six to eight specialists," Tanner said. "Basically, we need financial contributions so the specific food and water purification items can be obtained. The refugees need the basics — food, water and medicines. The best way for us to get those is through financial donations so that their needs can be met."

The Red Cross is currently distributing food to Rwandan refugees in Zaire. They are also installing 25 to 30 collapsible water tanks to provide clean water for the refugees.

"The Red Cross is being challenged in Rwanda and Zaire as never before," said Elizabeth Dole, national director for the American Red Cross. "The crisis has erupted so quickly that we are literally in a race against time to save lives."

"It's a race we simply cannot lose or it will be a tragedy of unimaginable proportions."

Donations or inquiries should be sent marked "Rwandan Relief" to American Red Cross, Central Utah Chapter.

Rwandan refugees wage war against new foe: cholera

By DARC Y KIRKHAM
Universe Staff Writer

The most severe problem facing Rwandan refugees is not potential political warfare; it's a microbe that is conquering the populous and leaving innumerable casualties behind.

The minuscule foe waging the internal war is cholera.

The American Red Cross estimates that 3,000 Rwandan refugees are dying each day from the dehydrating effect of cholera.

"Cholera comes from an organism that lives in contaminated food and water," said Sandy Schulthies, a community health specialist for the Utah State Health Department. "It is contained in people's stool."

"If someone has cholera, goes to the bathroom, and doesn't wash his hands, he can transfer it to someone else."

The current problem in Africa is severe because the crowded refugee camps don't have any sanitation methods to help prevent the spread of the disease, Schulthies said.

Cholera is an acute diarrhea illness caused by an infection of the intestines with the bacterium, Vibrio cholerae 01, according to a medical brief from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Symptoms include profuse watery diarrhea, vomiting and leg cramps.

Cholera causes death because the rapid loss of body fluids leads to dehydration and shock.

In Utah, cases of cholera are very rare.

"Cholera is not something that we see here very often," said Robert Tanner, community health specialist for the Utah State Health Department.

"In 1993 we did have two cases. The people had traveled outside of the U.S. and then came home and tested positive," Tanner said.

"We haven't had any cases in 1994."

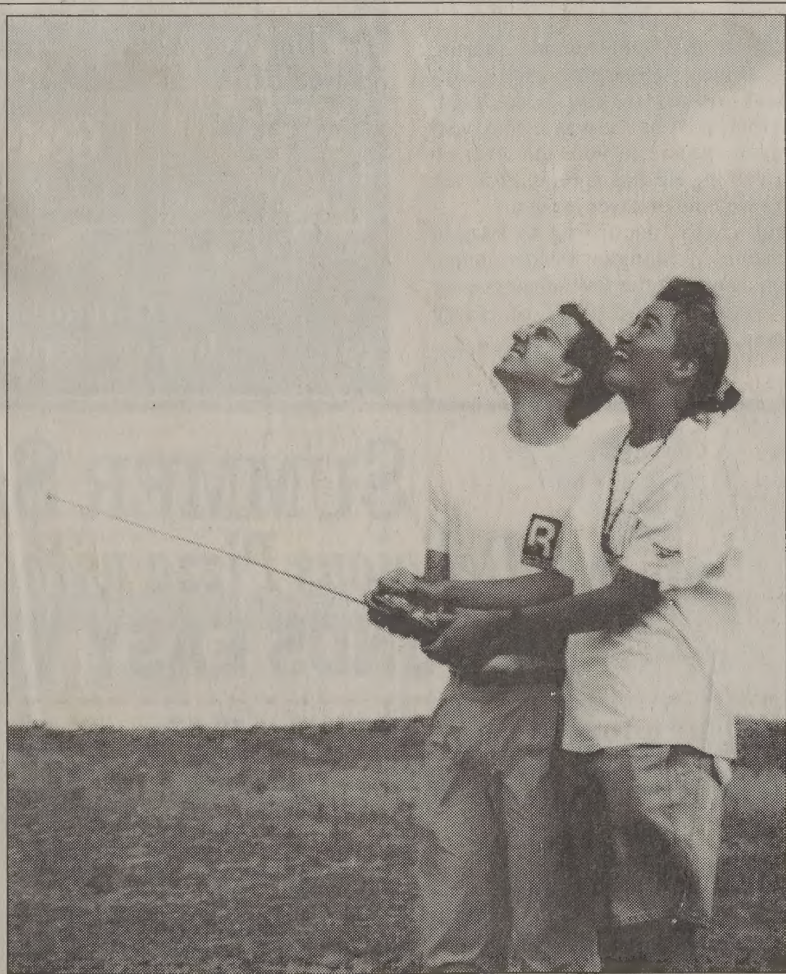

Rainman model speaks Saturday at JSB auditorium

By HANS MORAN

Gasavant Kim Peek, the original model for Dustin Hoffman's Academy Award winning role in the 1976 film "Rainman," will speak at the first Multiple Intelligences Conference on Multiple Intelligences Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Joseph Smith Building Auditorium.

Peek will be accompanied by his brother, Fran Peek, and together they will discuss Kim's progress since "Rainman," compare his status in the world of the multiple intelligences, and demonstrate some of his extraordinary abilities. This is the first time Peek has been invited to make a presentation on multiple intelligences, Peek said.

"We're going to focus primarily on Kim's seven levels of intelligence, and his abilities in each," Fran said. "We'll try to get the audience to interact with Kim to provide some observations on each of those levels of intelligence. I want the audience to test

Multiple Intelligences conference to kick-off at Y Saturday morning

By HANS MORAN
Universe Staff Writer

A new philosophy in education, the theory of multiple intelligences, will reach a milestone in Utah on Saturday with the first Utah Conference on Multiple Intelligences beginning at 8:30 a.m. in the Joseph Smith Memorial and David O. McKay buildings.

Keith Rogers, associate professor of secondary education and conference organizer, said the conference will focus on how multiple intelligences can be enhanced in the school, the home, the community and the church. The conference is sponsored by the College of Education. Specific sections will discuss multiple intelligences in the different levels of education, from home and pre-school to post graduate studies.

"We're going to talk about some specific things people can do to use the concept of multiple intelligences to develop curriculum and instruction," Rogers said.

Guest speakers for the conference will include Dr. Sue Teale from the University of California, Riverside and Dr. George Betts from Northern Colorado University.

Teale is the director of the California Certification in Teaching Multiple Intelligences program and Betts is the founder of the Autonomous Learning Program for Gifted Students.

Betts said he will discuss what people can do to expand their understanding of life-long learning within the seven different intelligences.

"I will discuss the importance of self-esteem and the part it plays in the whole concept of developing the multiple intelligences," he said. "Multiple intelligences helps us see the idea of education in a broader perspective, which in the past has been reduced to the logical, linguistic and mathematical areas."

Rogers explained that the concept of multiple intelligences help people understand each other as more than simple monolithic IQ scores which reflect verbal and quantitative abilities.

"Each of us is a unique blend of several categories of intelligence," he said. "These, understood and nurtured properly, can improve quality, efficiency and effectiveness in unlocking the potential of individuals through educational efforts at all levels."

Rogers said the multiple intelligences are grouped into the following seven categories: Intrapersonal, Bodily-Kinesthetic, Musical-Rhythmic, Visual-Spatial, Verbal-Linguistic, Interpersonal and Logical-Mathematical.

"The multiple intelligences are separate strengths and abilities, self-selected contents in each of the areas of learning that a lot of times we prescribe ourselves to follow, often without realizing it," Betts said.

Teale said she will discuss how to restructure the existing educational systems by integrating the concept of multiple intelligences into all fibers of the educational process. Doing this will help teachers find ways for all students to succeed in their dominant intelligences and strengthen the weaker ones.

"Research is showing that now we teach two of the 7 intelligences — verbal-linguistic and logical-mathematical," Teale said. "Our student population comes with all seven intelligences, many with strengths in the intelligences that we don't emphasize."

To test and rate a person within the seven intelligences, Rogers has developed the Rogers Multiple Intelligence Indicator which allows him to describe a person's strengths and weaknesses with accuracy by looking at seven different scores, he said.

"Those scores tell me whether you have a low, moderate or high preference and probably competence, in each one of the seven intelligence categories," Rogers said.

Teachers can use an individual's high ability in one intelligence to help him learn in another, perhaps weaker intelligence, Betts said this is one of the most exciting school reform opportunities because it validates

Shea packs camper for grass roots campaign

SALT LAKE CITY — Democrat Pat Shea says he is climbing aboard an aging pickup camper rig, but he won't be fishing in the mountains. This time, he will be angling for votes in scores of remote Utah communities in a bid to unseat incumbent Sen. Orrin Hatch.

Campaign manager Mike Reberg calls the camper — a 12-year-old model loaned to Shea by a friend in exchange for needed repairs — a "working-class limousine."

Shea has an office in Salt Lake City, but he will be spending much of the next three months campaigning on the road.

"By word of mouth we'll make up for not having the $4 million (Hatch) will spend," he said. "If I'm elected, what I would want to do is have a mobile office. If elected I would visit every county every year."

Shea is campaigning on a term-limitation theme, hoping Hatch's 18 years in office will prove too much for voters.

But Hatch rejects Shea's claims that in nearly two decades of Washington politics, he has lost touch with his constituents.

"I've already been to all 29 counties this year," the senator said. "(Shea's) got to be careful if he's saying Hatch is not out there."

LDS Church joins relief effort in Rwanda

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints plans to announce today its relief-effort contributions in the hunger and disease tragedies of Rwanda.

LDS Church spokesman Don LeFevre said the Church has planned aiding efforts for some time. The Church has missions in the African states of Ghana, Nigeria, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Kenya and Ivory Coast.

People in refugee camps in Rwanda are dying at the estimated rate of one life every minute from rampant cholera and other diseases.

Deseret International, a local relief group, announced that the LDS Church had contributed to their cause.

Many other organizations are coming to the aid of the appalling medical conditions caused by a contaminated water supply from the nearby Lake Kivu.

Representative's friend lobbies for his position

DETROIT — As a child, Melvin Hollowell delivered leaflets for Rep. John Conyers. As Conyers seeks re-election to a 16th term, it's no surprise that Hollowell is leafleting again.

But this time, Hollowell wants Conyers' job.

It is a challenge that was once unthinkable. A 34-year-old lawyer who has never held elective office is running against a 65-year-old Detroit legend first elected 30 years ago when blacks were just coming to political power.

In Tuesday's primaries, Conyers faces Hollowell and Marie Farrell-Donaldson, Detroit's 46-year-old ombudsman.

Conyers' opponents have few substantive differences on issues, but argue he has been ineffective and in Washington too long. Conyers retorts that his tenure and chairmanship of the House Government Operations Committee gives him an advantage that no newcomer could match.

Suitor charged with slaying of candy heiress

CHICAGO — The case of the vanished Brach candy heiress, missing since the 1970s, broke with charges that a horse-trading suitor arranged her slaying to silence her after a big-money equestrian swindle.

Helen Vorhees Brach was last seen checking out of the Mayo Clinic in 1977. Her body was never found.

Richard Bailey, a stable owner prosecutors described as a con man preying on older women, was arraigned Wednesday on federal charges and held without bail.

In court awaiting his hearing, a pale, nervous-looking Bailey had to be escorted outside to vomit.

U.S. Attorney James Burns said Brach was killed after threatening to go to authorities after discovering Bailey had duped her into paying hundreds of thousands of dollars for worthless horses.

Brach, 65, became the sole heiress of the Brach Candy Co. fortune in 1970, after her husband, Frank, died. Most of her $30 million estate, which included a stable of thoroughbreds, went to charity when she was declared dead in 1984.

Bailey, 65, was charged with federal murder-conspiracy statutes.

If convicted on all charges, which include numerous fraud counts, Bailey could be sentenced to 245 years in prison.

More Clinton officials to face questioning

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans get a chance to question a wider range of Clinton officials on Whitewater Thursday, including a top aide of Mrs. Clinton's who asked last winter if the couple's lawyer could be briefed about a federal investigation.

Margaret Ann Williams, Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief of staff, will be among the 11 current and former White House officials expected to face questioning on the second day of Banking Committee hearings.

Williams' query about a briefing, at a Feb. 2 White House meeting, goes to the core of the political battle over the administration's handling of Whitewater.

Republicans contend it was improper for Treasury Department officials to brief White House aides on the federal investigation touching on the Clintons' land deal.

Williams sought to go further, asking about a briefing for the Clintons' private lawyer, according to a publicly released chronology given to the House by the White House counsel and to notes of congressional interviews.

Thursday's witnesses will be 10 senior White House officials and former White House counsel, Bernard Nussbaum. They all were involved in trying to control the public damage for Clinton in Whitewater news stories.

The current counsel, Lloyd N. Cutler, testified Tuesday that briefings for White House officials about the investigation were proper.

Cutler also says in the chronology it would have been proper to give private lawyers the same briefing given the White House aides on Feb. 2 by Roger C. Altman, acting chief of the Resolution Trust Corp.

Altman was giving the White House officials a "heads up" about the RTC's pursuit of civil claims against failed thrifts, including Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan.

Madison was owned by the Clintons' Whitewater business partner, and a key question for investigators was whether the land venture caused losses at the S&L.

"Maggie Williams attempted to do the wrong thing," said Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y. "She was abusing her office to give insider information and unethical aid to the first lady and first family."

The RTC typically acts much differently in its dealings with those connected to its probes.

"They would never contact you or me and say, 'This is where we are in the investigation, thought you would like to know,'" said John Douglas, an Atlanta attorney who has represented officers of failed thrifts who are being sued by the RTC.

White House officials did not immediately respond to requests for comment. There is no indication the briefing for the private lawyer ever took place.

There are accounts of Williams' role in the Feb. 2 meeting. Cutler's chronology said, "Ms. Williams inquired whether Mr. Altman intended to provide the same information" he was giving at the meeting "to the Clintons' private lawyers. Mr. Altman said he assumed so."

Williams, in an interview with the House committee, said she did not recall asking the question but said it would be consistent with her position that personal legal matters should be addressed by private lawyers — not the White House staff.

According to the notes from Altman's interview with the House panel: "Altman was asked at the meeting whether the Clintons' private attorney, David Kendall, could be provided with the information. Altman thought he could. (Treasury General Counsel) Jean Hanson was to follow up."

'94 campaigning begins, accusations run rampant

By ROBERT COLEMAN
Universe Staff Writer

A vigorous fight is underway between Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch and Democratic challenger Pat Shea as their campaigns heat up and accusations begin to fly.

The latest round of attacks question which candidate has received greater attention from special interest groups.

Shea fired first, criticizing Hatch for being cited in a newly released Citizen Action report. The consumer watchdog group named Hatch the No. 1 Congressional recipient of drug company Political Action Committee money, receiving over $71,000 from the PAC during the past 18 months.

Citizen Action also named Hatch among the top 10 recipients of health and insurance dollars during the same period.

For years, Hatch has consistently argued against drug industry regulation and price restraints, Shea said.

"When a senator becomes the handmaiden of industry rather than the representative of the Utah voters who sent him to Washington, the Democratic system grinds to a halt," Shea said.

The Hatch campaign was quick to fire back, pointing to the large percentage of money Shea received from special interest groups.

"In 1992, when he ran for governor, over two-thirds of his money came from special interests," said Heather Barney, Hatch campaign spokesperson. "Once again, (this election) two-thirds of his money is coming from special interests."

Jane Semmel, Shea campaign spokesperson, responded that comparing percentages of the candidates campaign funds does not give the full picture.

"The difference is we've only received $100,000 from PAC's compared to over $1 million for Hatch," she said.

Shea's PAC money is primarily from labor organizations, Semmel said.

"That represents 65,000 Utah families," she said. "That's our special interest." The Hatch campaign will rely on the reputation of integrity the senator has built up over the last 18 years among constituents and colleagues, Barney said.

"It's no secret that people sharing your same philosophies will contribute money to you," she said. "Orrin Hatch has always, and will always continue to vote for what he believes in. He has a reputation for doing what he believes is right."

That's why, according to Parade magazine, Washington insiders name Hatch as one of the few senators with the "integrity and guts" of Harry Truman, she said.

Orton says allegations against Clintons show 'hallmarks of McCarthyism'

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Three members of Utah's congressional delegation are serving on committees investigating the Clinton administration and the Whitewater affair.

Sen. Bob Bennett is on the Senate Banking Committee, which opens hearings Friday on questions arising from the investment scandal.

Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch is serving as a nonvoting panel member, representing the Judiciary Committee in the hearings.

First into the fray has been Democratic Rep. Bill Orton, who sits on the House Banking Committee. That panel began its hearings on Tuesday.

Already, Orton has had his fill of what he sees as partisan political attacks on President Clinton.

Allegations against Clinton and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, have the "hallmarks of McCarthyism," he said.

The congressman believes the current hearings, restricted to examining the propriety of meetings between banking regulators and White House aides, will conclude there was no criminal or ethical wrongdoing.

"I would be less than candid if I didn't say my reading (of background documents) leads me to believe there is a feeling in the White House that says 'we must protect the president at all costs, rather than an attitude that 'we must tell the truth,'" Bennett added.

Hatch said he is not jumping to conclusions, but he believes information that has surfaced so far justifies deeper investigation.

receivers take aim at CFL careers Race enters last 3 weeks

DYNAMIC DUO: Eric Drage and Tyler Anderson will be on opposite sides of the ball when they meet in a CFL matchup this Friday.

Drage, Anderson square off in CFL matchup

By KELLI DAVIS
Universe Sports Writer

Former BYU wide receiver Micah Matsuzaki was cut from the CFL last June, but still has hopes that his future may include a football career.

Matsuzaki, who completed his senior season averaging 45.5 yards per game, was cut from the British Columbia Lions in the CFL after one week of rookie camp.

"I went to the camp on June 10th and I was cut after the week of practice," Matsuzaki said. "I don't know why, I guess they thought I just wasn't good enough."

Matsuzaki is currently back at home living in Honolulu with his family hoping to hear from his agent.

"Right now I am just waiting around to see if I will get a call from my agent," Matsuzaki said. "I haven't talked to him in a while but I plan on talking to him soon and then I'll go from there."

Though Micah is having a blast just playing in Hawaii, he is still concentrating on staying in shape.

"I surf every day for 2-3 hours," Matsuzaki said. "I have been working out and when I'm not surfing I'm lifting weights."

Matsuzaki would love to continue playing football.

"I don't know what will work out with the CFL, but I really want to play football and would love to play in the NFL," Matsuzaki said.

As far as talent goes, BYU head football coach LaVell Edwards feels Matsuzaki has what it takes to be able to advance and play ball.

"Micah is a great player and he will get a chance to play ball if he can just get to the right place," Edwards said. "The problem with pro-football is that it's just luck if you're selected because there is just a limited number of players teams can pick up."

Matsuzaki still has five classes left at BYU before he will graduate in sociology.

"I will come back to school, I just don't know when yet," Matsuzaki said. "I really miss BYU, but I also really miss the beach when I have to leave it."

Drage likes playing in the CFL and hopes his stay with the Argonauts is permanent.

"Football is going really great," Drage said. "We are finally moving out of this stupid hotel we've been living in and moving into an apartment."

The game will be the first time the two play on opposing teams.

Anderson, who went to play for the Posse two weeks ago, will get the chance to play against Eric as he was moved last Saturday from the practice squad to the active roster.

"I was moved up to the active roster last weekend because I have been doing well in the practices," Anderson said. "I got to play in the game for about 10 minutes but they never threw the ball my way."

Though Anderson is currently playing as an inside receiver it may not be for long.

"They are thinking about changing my position to outside receiver," Anderson said. "They think that I am the fastest guy on the team."

Anderson feels it will be 2-3 weeks before he gets to see a lot of playing time.

"I need some time to prove myself," Anderson said. "One of the guys on the active roster who was hurt just came back and so that may affect how much I get to play."

Anderson is happy that he is playing for the Posse.

With three weeks left in the race for the Choosing-n-Losing title, last week's guest Marco Diaz (6-4) narrowed the race to one game.

The total tally now stands at: guest prognosticators 70-60, so-called-sports-doctor 71-59.

This week's guest is BYU football coach LaVell Edwards. Coach Edwards is coming up on his 200th career victory this season (197), so this is an opportunity for him to get some wins that don't count in his on-field record. The majority of these games are baseball games, with the final contest being a Canadian Football League game featuring former Cougars Eric Drage (Toronto Argonauts) and Tyler Anderson (Las Vegas Posse).

1. Rockies at Giants (7/28): LaVell-Giants, Josh-Giants (Does anyone know that the Rockies are ahead of the Giants in the NL West?). 2. Reds at Padres (7/28): LaVell-Reds, Josh-Padres (Go with the underchi!). 3. Red Sox at Yankees: LaVell-Yankees, Josh-Yankchi (Conformity stinks). 4. Brewers at Blue Jays (7/28): LaVell-Toronto, Josh-Toronto (Or is it Toronto?). 5. Angels at Rangers (7/28): LaVell-Rangers, Josh-Angels (I forgot to tell LaVell that this was the Texas Rangers, not the NHL's New York Rangers). 6. Indians at Yankees (7/29): LaVell-Indians, Josh-Yankees (The Yankees were accused of taking over the Indian's land in the early days of this great country, this time the Yankees will leave no doubt that they are controlling the tribe). 7. A's at Detroit (7/29): LaVell-Tigers, Josh-A's (Toss up ... it was tails). 8. Top U.S. gymnast dies at age 22

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Christy Henrich was a fierce competitor. But by 1990, the 4-foot-10 gymnast was so weak from eating disorders, she withdrew from competition.

On Tuesday, she died at age 22.

A victim of anorexia nervosa and bulimia, Henrich died of multiple organ system failure after more than two years in the hospital. Research Medical Center wouldn't say how much she weighed at her death, but she had wasted away to 60 pounds a year ago.

She was an extremely strong person. She was a bull, just a tank," said her former coach, Al Fong, who became estranged from the Henrich family after confronting the teen-ager in 1989 about her eating problems.

"I kicked her out of the gym for her own good," he said. "I said, 'You're going to kill yourself.' She was throwing herself into the equipment because she couldn't do the routines. I set up all these appointments with the nutritionists, and then I found out she wasn't attending those sessions."

Henrich had missed making the 1988 Olympic team by .0188 of a point. Acutely disappointed, she aimed for the 1992 trials. In between, the vicious cycle of anorexia and bulimia took over.

She withdrew from a competition in the fall of 1990 and retired from gymnastics in January 1991. She was among the top 10 of U.S. gymnasts at the time but was too weak to compete.

"My life is a horrifying nightmare," she said then. "It feels like there's a beast inside of me, like a monster. It feels evil."

A TRADITION FOR ALMOST HALF A CENTURY

Legacy reaches its 1 millionth viewer

By WADE MCAFERTY
Universe Staff Writer

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints surpassed the number of viewers of the movie "Legacy," which depicts the 19th century challenges of the Latter-day Saints as they made their way from the East to the Midwest and finally to the Rocky Mountains, is shown eleven times daily.

For me, the film made the sacrifice of the early Saints more real," said Richard Cowan, professor of Church History. "Many people seeing it might also gain an appreciation, thinking why the people went through what they did."

Nathan Walker, a senior from Olympia, majoring in sports medicine, saw the film three times and said it enhanced his appreciation of the early Saints. "Seeing the movie makes it more of a real situation," he said. "You feel the suffering of these pioneers and it makes you appreciate what they did for the cause. It was fantastic."

Tickets can only be obtained on the same day as the showing, except for large groups. Group reservations may be made by calling 801-240-4383.

'Madame Butterfly' opera to open in Logan tonight

By MINDI HULLINGER
Universe Staff Writer

cherry-blossomed set, time-period costuming and amazingly accurate Japanese mannerisms set the stage for tonight's performance of Giacomo Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" at the Utah Festival Opera in Logan.

"Butterfly" is in the early 1900s. B.F. Pinkerton, an American naval officer played by Richard Nickol, comes to Japan as a marriage broker to find a temporary wife for him while he is on leave in Japan.

Pinkerton marries 15-year-old Cio-Cio-San ("Madame Butterfly"), who is played by Sharon Davis, who considers marriage a lifetime commitment and is disowned by her family for renouncing the religion of her ancestors.

Not surprisingly, tragedy results from the union.

Davis, who has performed with several opera companies in highly acclaimed roles, seems unwearied by the diversified, demanding role of Cio-Cio-San.

Rather, she adds grace to a character trapped in an emotional dilemma as she sings throughout the performance.

Nickol, who has performed extensively throughout the United States, is as convincing as an indulgent American officer as Davis is a trusting Japanese girl. His bold voice calls for attention whenever he is present.

The combination works. Together,

Davis and Nickol create a clear contrast between Cio-Cio-San's deep-rooted feelings of loyalty to her marriage and Pinkerton's nonchalant attitude toward what he views as a temporary relationship.

But it takes more than strong lead performers to bring an audience to their feet.

Outstanding performances by supporting artists Nocola Di Toro as Sharpless, Martha Glissmeyer as Suzuki, and Mallory Walker as Goro, give "Butterfly" added life and color.

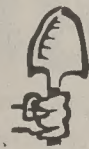

Performances will be today at 2 p.m. and tomorrow at 5 p.m. at the Ellen Eccles Theatre in Logan. For ticket information call 752-0028.

strength areas in individuals, rather than just looking at the traditional contents that have been used in the past.

"We're losing (students) because we're not tapping into the way they learn," Teele said. "Through structural strategies, teachers can help them translate their dominant intelligences into other things that they can do well."

"Our goal is not to develop the student, but the life-long learner," Betts said.

Teele said she trains teachers to teach using methods that enhance all the intelligences. During the conference she will present a model which she believes can be replicated anywhere.

"Every student has a gift and brings that gift to the classroom," she said. "When students engage in the learning process utilizing their gift, or in other words, their dominant intelligence, their learning experience is enhanced because they are learning the way they learn best and their self-esteem increases because we focus on what they can do, rather than on what they can't do."

Bosnian Serbs ambush convoy; 2 soldiers wounded in attack

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs ambushed a U.N. convoy Wednesday as it approached a road into Sarajevo that Serbs had just closed. Two British soldiers were wounded in one of the worst attacks on peacekeepers in recent months.

The attack came the day the Serbs re-established their stranglehold on Sarajevo by closing off the only route open to commercial trucks.

Maj. Rob Annink, a peacekeepers' spokesman, said the Bosnian Serb army sent a letter of apology to the U.N. command several hours after the attack, saying their soldiers mistook the British convoy for a Bosnian government convoy.

Annink said one Bosnian truck was stuck on the stretch of road where the British trucks were.

Col. Hugh Dourtivron, deputy chief of staff for peacekeepers in Sarajevo, said one of the 5,200-gallon British tanker trucks burst into flames when the ambush began in mid-afternoon. Several of the nine other trucks were damaged.

"They were obviously aiming at the oil truck," said Lt. Johnny Mitchell, a British soldier in the convoy. "The vehicles were clearly marked, so it was a direct attack. I was scared."

The tanker was still burning hours after the crash. Once peacekeepers' headquarters was alerted, French armored vehicles raced to the scene. U.N. officials said NATO airplanes were called in to make overflights, but were not asked to counterattack.

"In this situation close air support is not useful because the targets had disappeared," Dourtivron said.

One British soldier was only lightly injured, the other was hit in the chest and underwent surgery.

The Serbs, in announcing the closure of the route to civilian and commercial traffic, had specified that U.N. vehicles would be allowed to use it.

U.N. spokeswoman Claire Grimes said the convoy was on a resupply mission, taking fuel from the British base in Vitez, northwest of Sarajevo, to Gorazde, southeast of the capital. She said the attack came without warning.

For the last four months, the "Blue Route" had been the source of roughly half the city's food and was the only way for residents to come and go.

The Serbs closed it today to pressure the government after rejecting a plan worked out by the United States, Britain, France, Russia and Germany.

The plan would pare back Serb territorial holdings from 70 percent to 49 percent, and give Bosnian Croats and Muslims the rest. The Croats and Muslims have accepted.

Diplomats and U.N. officials suggested the Serbs, in closing the "Blue Route," sought to distract the peace-plan proponents and remind them that Serb forces could still make life miserable for the people of Sarajevo.

"This is another attempt of the Serbs to ... provoke reaction from us which would draw attention away from the Contact Group meeting," said Bosnian government spokesman Kemal Muftic.

The closure of the supply road sent angry, worried shoppers surging into Sarajevo markets and stores, buying out stocks of flour, sugar and other goods.

Foreigner to play at Livestock '94 Saturday

By MICHAEL DRUMMOND
Universe Staff Writer

A stampede of classic rock will overrun the Utah State Fairpark this Saturday as KLZX Radio (Z-93) presents Livestock '94.

Foreigner and The Doobie Brothers will be the featured artists of the event.

"Co-headlining with The Doobie Brothers has been really great," said Bruce Turgon, bass player for Foreigner. "Together we bring a full spectrum of music. They are easy to get along with and real nice guys."

Other bands will be Bachman Turner Overdrive (BTO), Blue Oyster Cult, Rare Earth and Iron Butterfly.

Iron Butterfly will open at 11 a.m., The Doobie Brothers sing at 5 p.m. and Foreigner at 7 p.m.

"Because of time limitations we will just be doing one new song; it's called "Little White Lie," Turgon said. "For everyone who saw us last year it's all there — we're rocking Salt Lake," Turgon said.

The Doobie Brothers won't be singing a new song during this show, but hope to have another album released sometime next year, said John McFee, Doobie band member.

"We have a long-term commitment for the band to stay together," McFee said, "and we're looking forward to making a great new album."

McFee does see more than one album but said with a laugh, "at our age we take it one day at a time."

"No matter what, the band has a lot of momentum; it's like poison oak, it's hard to kill," McFee said.

Speaking about Livestock, McFee said, "Come on out and listen to the music."

A children's area will feature face painters, balloon sculptures, a hand-print wall, a human-powered gyroscope, sports, midway games and pony rides.

"The children's area has always been one of the favorite parts of the event," said Ginny Ragsdale, director of media relations.

Forty thousand people are expected to attend the event, Ragsdale said.

"Last year we were approaching that figure and we have increased our ground space by a third this year," Ragsdale said.

Water and restroom facilities have also been increased from last year, Ragsdale said.

"Basically it is a party for 40,000 of our closest friends," said Trisha Griffith, assistant program director for Z-93.

Tickets are on sale now for $10 in advance and $12 at the gate. Children 4 to 12 admitted free.

"You name any town in America, and he can tell you the same things about it," Rogers said. "His brain is like a video recorder; he'll read things, and he can call them back again whenever he wants. He can remember numbers possibly better than any other savant ever studied."

According to the March 21, 1993 edition of the Casper, Wyoming Star Tribune, Kim was born without a corpus collosum, the thin membrane that separates the right hemisphere of the brain from the left. As a result, he is able to recall everything he has ever read, seen or heard.

Fran said his son taught himself to read at age 3. Today Kim displays a 98 percent reading comprehension ability, retaining everything he reads.

After studying him, researchers at the UCLA neuro-studies department declared Kim a megasavant, probably a one of a kind brain, said.

Kim was the inspiration for the character "Rainman," although the film's actor is an autistic-savant.

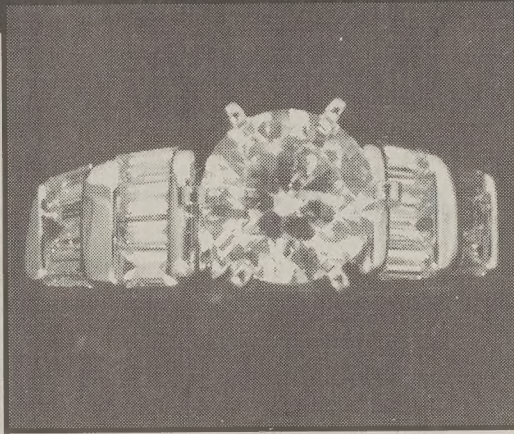

Kim has some minor characteristics of autism, but overall he's so warm and likes to meet people, he's not really autistic, said.

OF COURSE I'LL LOVE YOU IN THE MORNING.

Oh yes. Those promises that are so fluid when there is something to be gained.

Such empty promises are the hallmark of short relationships in love and in business.

At Wilson Diamonds we are happy to see you back after the sale. Maybe it's because our customers are happy to see us after they've experienced the lasting quality of our rings and the extraordinary sparkle of our diamonds. Or it could be the warm feeling of seeing our guarantees and post-sale promises at work (no charge to them). Of course, finding the perfect style is always a lasting satisfaction, thanks to Wilson's continuous good taste. And the added pleasure of Wilson's prices doesn't hurt either.

A quality diamond ring gets better with time, as does the reputation of the jeweler who sold it. Wilson Diamonds is the best beginning of a long and happy relationship.

Police Beat

City

By DAVID GARRETT
Universe Staff Writer

VANDALISM: A custodian called police at 5 a.m., Wednesday, after seeing juveniles at Westmore Elementary school in Orem. The police responded and apprehended two 16-year-old males who had been destroying the building for over three hours. The damage included over 60 art pieces, a bronze statue, a fax machine, two copy machines, light fixtures, telephones and a 150 gallon aquarium totalling $30,000. When police responded they had guns drawn and an officer slipped and fell in the water from the aquarium and discharged his weapon, the bullet went through a window. No one was hurt. The boys said the reason they did it was because they were bored. They were charged with attempted arson, burglary and criminal mischief.

ANGRY DRIVERS: A driver, aggravated at what he thought was slow driving in front of him, drove in front of the driver and braked hard sparking a confrontation. The two cars battled on the road from Provo to Orem exchanging words and gestures. The drivers stopped to resolve the conflict with their fists, but when one driver saw he was physically overmatched he took a hammer from his car. The other driver responded by getting a pipe. Both drivers pounded the other's vehicles and wrestled on the ground. One driver broke away and told Orem police about the incident. ANGRY DRIVERS: A driver was having car trouble and was driving slow with his hazards on Saturday. A car with three juveniles followed the car until it parked in a driveway and pounded the hood, windshield and side with a baseball bat and drove off.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT: A fight broke out over a parking stall by the Talmage Mathematical Sciences-Computer Building on Wednesday. A faculty member and a student became disgruntled when a vehicle without an A-permit cut them off and parked in a stall reserved for faculty and staff. After a brief verbal exchange, the student accompanying the faculty member returned to check on the vehicle together with another student. When they encountered the operator of the other vehicle, the disagreement turned physical. All three individuals were cited $150 each for disorderly conduct.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT: A male unhappy with his experience made obscene and threatening statements to Financial Aid office employees on Friday.

MENTAL SUBJECT: A male individual was reported harassing the front desk staff of the Missionary Training Center on Wednesday. The individual, who wanted to visit his daughter at the MTC, is known to have a mental condition. The individual was transported to Wasatch Mental Hospital.

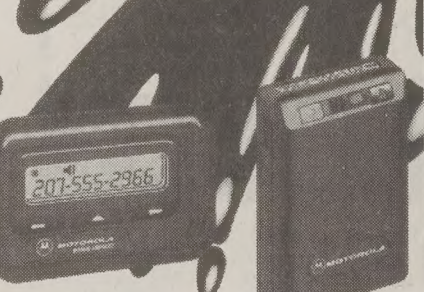

SHOPLIFTING: Two juveniles were apprehended in the BYU Bookstore on Friday after shoplifting batteries valued at $3.69. The two individuals will be referred to Juvenile Court.

THEFT: A Franklin planner, containing a personal check in the amount of $300, was stolen from the Abraham O. Smoot Administration Building Saturday. The stolen check later cleared the victim's checking account. Total loss is at $400.

VANDALISM: A car tire was slashed outside of the Clyde Engineering Science and Technology Building Monday night. Damage is estimated at $60.

AUTO ACCIDENT: Damages estimated at $1800 resulted from an accident in the Joseph F. Smith Family Living Center parking lot Thursday.
